Marked by delicate floral and herbal nuances and baskets of fresh strawberries, Trestle Thirty One's 2024 Rosé is mainly (93%) Cabernet Franc, with small amounts of Riesling (6%) and Chardonnay (1%). The result in the mouth is medium- to full-bodied, plump and round, then it slides easily into a long, silky-textured finish. I suspect almost all of the 154 cases produced won't survive the summer, but the wine should still drink well at least into 2026, perhaps even a bit longer.
